Abstracts

Appliances and electronics in Norway registered an uplift in value sales in 2023, largely due to inflationary pressures, which pushed up retail prices. Consumer demand weakened as interest rate hikes took hold, whilst the weak currency led to higher imports and raw material prices. White goods have performed poorly as consumers held off from making larger investments and home renovations. Some retailers have felt the pressure of high inflation and low margins on the bottom line. Nevertheless, co...

Euromonitor International's Appliances and Electronics Specialists in Norway report offers insight into key trends and developments driving the industry.
