Despite strong hurricane activity during 2017, including two storms of category five strength that passed through the Caribbean, the Dominican Republic saw another year of record arrivals. According to official statistics, the country received more than 4.7 million tourists as of September 2017, translating to a 4.9% inter-annual growth rate in the number of non-Dominican residents. Tourism generates the largest amount of hard currency for the country and remains a major source of employment. Th...
