Abstracts

Baby and child-specific products continued to see robust growth in 2022 as the post COVID-19 recovery continued. Current value growth was partly driven by higher inflation rates, but this resulted in weaker volume growth as some consumers reigned in expenditure on baby-specific products. Families continued to place a higher focus on children's health, hygiene and safety standards, brought on by the pandemic. Baby wipes saw the fastest growth in retail current value terms, with consumers using th...
