Abstracts

Baby care in Belarus demonstrated growth of 13% in current value terms in 2010. Unlike 2009, value growth was attributed not only to unit price growth caused by on-going inflation and slow national currency devaluation, but also to volume growth. Despite the crisis, key players focused on launching new products and improved versions of established products, including inexpensive brands. These increased in popularity due to the lower purchasing power in Belarus during the crisis, and consumers'...
