Abstracts

The declining birth rate in Taiwan has resulted in a fall in the average family size in the country with the result that most parents are spending more money on their children than before. In response to this trend, many manufacturers have developed new middle and premium priced products in order to fuel sales and attract consumers. In 2010, baby care recorded current retail value growth of 1%.

Euromonitor International's Baby Care in Taiwan report offers a comprehensive guide to the size and shape of the market at a national level.
