Abstracts

While there is an increasing number of products that cater for women's life stages during pregnancy and postpartum, the concept of segmenting babies and children and purchasing different skin care and hair care products according to their ages is emerging. Children, who play outside more often and are exposed to the sun's UV rays and other external factors, tend to require more effective products than babies, but their skin is still immature and sensitive. Therefore, Natural Science's Mama & Kid...
