Abstracts

Retail sales of baked goods continued to decline in 2023 in the face of the still-elevated rate of inflation, which impacted the cost of living and caused consumers to rationalise their spending. This translated into a movement away from packaged baked goods towards cheaper unpackaged alternatives. This was in sharp contrast to the pandemic years, when there was a shift towards packaged baked goods, due to growing consumer hygiene concerns.

Euromonitor International's Baked Goods in Czech Republic report offers in-depth knowledge of the market at a national level, providing local insight and understanding unavailable elsewhere.
