Abstracts

Total packaging volumes in baby food saw slow and stable growth in Sweden over 2020-2022, with the pandemic and associated economic uncertainties having little impact on the category. Swedish parents consider their children's nutrition to be a priority in their purchasing decisions, and prioritise the needs of their children over their own. As such, they continued to purchase baby food. In particular, prepared baby food and other baby food saw growth in packaging volumes throughout the pandemic,...
