Abstracts

In 2022, many consumers returned to their normal lives as the COVID-19 pandemic eased. However, most people now have to take into consideration the rising cost of living in South Africa. As a result of this, sales of beauty and personal care products were hampered by the struggling South African economy in 2022. During this year, many consumers made cuts to their spending, prioritising necessities over non-essentials. As more people in South Africa had less disposable income, this hampered sales...
