Abstracts

No-Deal Brexit has been avoided. On Christmas Eve 2020, the UK and the EU struck a last-minute trade agreement to avoid disruptions threatening to prolong the pandemic-driven economic downturn affecting both the EU and the UK. Despite the two blocs agreeing to a deal, future risks remain. The absence of a transition period after the deal was signed means that disruptions could not be completely avoided. In the years ahead, EU-UK trade will continue to be at the centre of discussion.
