Abstracts

The federal beverage alcohol duty was set to increase by 6.3% on March 2023, which would have forced some bars and restaurants out of business. However, the federal government decided to cap the increase at 2% on April 2023, which will stay in place for one year, pending budget approval. The decision prevented business owners from implementing additional price increases, which would have considerably impacted demand. As a result, the industry has maintained increasing demand post-COVID-19.
