Abstracts

Wet cat food in Mexico stands out as the leading performer in the category, recording double-digit growth in both value and volume terms. This trend is being fuelled by the increasing number of cats and pet-owning households in Mexico. Unlike with dogs, wet cat food tends to be more commonly mixed with dry food, not seen as merely a treat or supplement but as an integral part of pet nutrition. This perception drives its significant growth as pet populations rise in local households.
