Abstracts

Childrenswear did not perform well even before the pandemic, as the number of children has been continuously decreasing in Japan. Growth was then hit hard in 2020, experiencing a double-digit decline, followed by a year of little movement in 2021 as COVID-19 prevailed over the country and home seclusion was seen. Although society began to open up from 2022, which should have driven growth, volume and current value sales of childrenswear continued to see little movement, as the impact of the drop...
