Abstracts

The cigarette industry was surprised by the steep decline in retail volume sales in 2018 as health awareness continued to rise and the poor image of smoking intensified, particularly among younger demographics. The volume decline even led to flat retail value sales in 2018, despite further rises in specific taxation on cigarettes. Although the percentage of the adult population who smoked declined over the review period, the actual number of adult smokers also fell for the first time in the revi...
