Abstracts

The clothing sector did not perform well in 2008. The improved economic and retail conditions helped the sector to show a further recovery in the first six months of 2008 and sales for most product groups increased in that period. The second half of 2008 was also tough and this meant that overall the sector registered a loss in sales value. There were a number of contributing factors, but the threat of an economic depression and the turmoil on the international financial markets made consumers...
