Abstracts

Consumer health in Azerbaijan is seeing something of a resurgence in 2023. New entrants are livening up the marketplace, and fresh medications are making their mark. The once-stringent Tariff Regulatory Authority has taken a step back, loosening the reins on price controls—a move that, while causing some immediate hiccups, promises a more fluid and responsive market in the long run. Previously, such regulatory shackles had big global players exiting the local competition. The short-term effects...
