Abstracts

In 2023, urbanisation, population growth and health and wellness drove retail sales. Most consumers self-medicated as the cheaper option and due to limited access to doctors outside of key cities. An overburdened public health sector and expensive private health mean consumers rely on family/social circles and advice from pharmacists. Moreover, global inflation posed challenges to imports and led to price rises locally. Illicit trade is still very popular, despite government efforts to halt it.
