Abstracts

During the review period, the flu and allergy season in South Africa was rife specifically during the winter periods. Given the presence of several flu strains and allergies, consumers reached out to cough, cold and allergy (hay fever) products to help them get better and alleviate their symptoms. Since the onset of the global pandemic, more consumers have been keen to avoid colds and flus and are more likely to stay and home when they are ill until they are better. This is particularly true amo...
