Abstracts

The removal of mask-wearing and social distancing measures in March 2023 led to rising demand for cough, cold and allergy remedies as respiratory infections increased. Since February 2020, local seasonal influenza in Hong Kong has remained at a low level, primarily due to the implementation of mask-wearing and social distancing policies in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. These measures have been in place to reduce the transmission of respiratory viruses, including influenza. As a result, Hong...
