Abstracts

The picture is expected to be positive for dairy products and alternatives in 2023, with overall current value and volume sales expected to rise moderately. While inflation remains high, pressure is expected to ease. In addition, the appreciation of the Dominican peso against the US dollar is expected to make imports slightly less expensive. That being said, there are continuing price pressures on local producers, with significant costs rises for fertilisers etc. In addition, drought-like condit...
