Abstracts

With inflation at over 25% in the first quarter of 2023, Hungary experienced the 10th-highest food-related price increase in the world. The high unit price in dairy products and alternatives was bolstered by the international price increase of raw milk, the devaluation of the forint and the related increased exporting activities. As a consequence, in November 2022, the government implemented a price cap on selected basic food, and the regulation was extended until 30 June 2023. 2.8% fat content...
