Abstracts

In 2022 and early 2023, dairy in Italy was particularly affected by price increases due to inflation. This has seen a drop in consumption in some categories, such as butter and spreads. This situation was aggravated by lower milk production in Italy, which negatively affected cheese production, leading to further price increases. This climate of uncertainty has made it difficult for companies manage their business, with many producers forced to reduce production or even close their operations. T...
