Abstracts

Following the outbreak of COVID-19, sales have continued to normalise, with Swedes ventured back to their workplaces, and eating out more often. However, the unit prices hikes seen in 2022, continued to grow in 2023, driven by the inflation and increasing production costs. As such, consumers continued to adapt their shopping habits, with reduced disposable budgets seeing many cut down on their purchases, buying private label or buying goods when on price promotions. However, there were differenc...
