Abstracts

The economic downturn hit drinking milk products strongly. Even though in 2010 the economy was better than in the previous year, consumers' disposable incomes were still lower, and many people suffered from unemployment in Ireland, as the unemployment rate was still over 11%. People started to cut back on their expenditure, and this also affected drinking milk products. As milk is part of the traditional Irish diet, it is still consumed with cereals and hot drinks such as coffee and tea, and...
