Abstracts

The Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic brought spikes in retail volume and current value growth across most categories of dietary supplements in 2020 and 2021. Dietary supplements with immune system positioning saw particularly strong interest from Slovak consumers in the face of the virus. However, as the pandemic was brought under control, the demand for such dietary supplements stabilised. Instead, consumers shifted their focus towards other types of dietary supplements, with positioning such as...
