Abstracts

Drinking milk products has continued to post growth in current value terms in 2024, however, this growth is largely due to inflation and price rises rather than an increase in demand. Aside from flavoured milk drinks and the niche category of goat milk, all other categories within drinking milk products have seen declining sales in retail volume terms in 2024. This decline is based on several factors. The price of cow's milk has been rising due to an increase in production costs, especially for...
