Abstracts

In 2023, inflation still had a notable impact on edible oils in Germany, leading to elevated prices and changes in consumer behaviour. Factors such as rising labour costs, fuel prices and agricultural inputs contributed to higher production expenses for edible oil manufacturers. These increased costs continued to be passed on to consumers, and despite a marginal drop in the average unit price in 2023, the latter remained considerably higher than pre-pandemic levels, thereby affecting the afforda...
