Abstracts

The edible oils category experienced another year of decline in 2023, both in volume and value terms, following contraction in the previous year. The fact that the CPO (crude palm oil) price had not yet fallen was a key reason for this performance. The continued fall in volume sales, as the majority of consumers (low and middle income) still found the prices too steep and continued to try to reduce consumption. As a result, even with the high price, value growth was also negative due to falling...
