Abstracts

Korean Government spending on education surged by 14% y-o-y in 2017, reaching KRW62 billion. Nevertheless, the industry posted slower growth in 2017, mainly due to declining enrolment rates in education. This is a result of the slumping birth rate in the country. In fact, in 2017 South Korea recorded its lowest-ever fertility rate of 1.05 births per woman, and became the world's fastest-ageing developed economy.
