Abstracts

In 2023, eyewear takes a significant stride towards a 'return to normal' as it transitions back to more typical growth rates. The previous year, 2022, witnessed strong growth driven by pandemic-related factors as consumers who had postponed purchases in 2021 resumed their buying activities. However, in 2023, the impact of the pandemic is less pronounced, and growth is primarily driven by conventional factors such as new fits for contact lenses and the aging population's increased need for correc...
