Abstracts

After COVID-19 was downgraded to class 5 in May 2023, consumers felt more comfortable eating out. This contributed to a sales rebound for full-service restaurants, but challenges remained. Costs continued to rise, and players continued to find it difficult to control production costs. In particular, the weakening yen impacted the costs of imported products such as meat and wheat. Logistics and energy costs also remained high. Although some companies had already implemented price increases in 202...
