Abstracts

Ageing, urbanisation and migration remain the major drivers shaping the global population. The number of seniors worldwide was increasing in 2022 and is expected to continue growing to 2040. The number of births is declining globally due to falling fertility rates, later marriages and other factors influencing lifestyle changes. The end of COVID-19 restrictions, political unrest and the search for better living conditions continue to encourage increasing mobility and migration around the world.

Strategy Briefings offer unique insight into emerging trends world-wide.
