Abstracts

The revenues of Australia's healthcare and social service providers saw a healthy increase in 2018, supported primarily by strong growth in government spending. The public budget estimates for health resources for 2019-20 were raised by more than 2% year-on-year. The government spending increase was a result of continuing enrolment in the National Disability Insurance Scheme, which is being gradually introduced over the 2016-2019 period, leading to stronger than industry average growth in social...
