Abstracts

The industry's growth slowed down in 2018, as a successful surge in exports in 2017 did not repeat and domestic sales were sluggish. In 2017, Japanese electronics makers enjoyed a rapid increase in exports of semiconductor products and other electronic components to expanding Asian economies and other growing foreign markets. However, 2018 showed a turnaround, as international demand slowed down, especially in China, which is increasingly pressured by trade disputes with the US. Domestically, si...
