Abstracts

Demand for home care products in Vietnam continued to increase in 2023, supported by a growing middle class population, which had access to higher levels of disposable income. A heightened focus on health and hygiene, facilitated by the pandemic, also had a positive impact on sales of home care products, especially those with bacteria-fighting properties. However, the rate of retail volume growth was slower than the previous year, as the high cost of living weighed on consumer confidence. With p...
