Abstracts

Home video is set to show negative developments in both volume and current value terms across almost all product categories in 2023. Sales of LCD TVs, which includes LED and QLED devices, are expected to experience volume and value declines in this year. This is mainly due to saturation caused by the pandemic, when high-quality TVs and accessories were purchased by consumers on a large scale, and the long lifecycle of most products. Although OLED TVs is set to be the only growth category in both...
