Abstracts

Homeware products failed to see any visible growth in constant value terms in 2022, despite the continuation of the home cooking trend. This was in sharp contrast to 2021, when COVID-19 restrictions required people to spend longer periods of time at home. This led many consumers to turn their attention to the kitchen to cook and relax, which translated into a notable upturn in value sales of homewares, in particular stove top cookware, ovenware, kitchen utensils and food storage. With consumers...
