Abstracts

The Indonesian economy grew by 5.1% in 2018, supported by the expanding real value of private final consumption on the back of rising incomes, coupled with low and controlled inflation. According to Euromonitor's estimates, Indonesia's median disposable income per household increased by 6.6% year-on-year to IDR129.1 million in 2018. The positive socioeconomic environment, along with the burgeoning middle class and the upward trend in female employment, largely contributed to the strengthening re...
