Abstracts

The COVID-19 pandemic renewed consumers' interest in health and wellness, and brought health issues to the fore. In 2022, many consumers were still concerned with infection and their ability to recover from the virus, and sought to improve their overall health to reduce the risk of severe illness. Health issues associated with the cardiovascular system were a key concern amongst consumers, as these are perceived to hinder recovery from respiratory illnesses such as COVID-19. In addition, there w...
