Abstracts

One of the major issues of the pandemic was that people had fewer opportunities to do physical activities, as they stayed at home most of the time. Accordingly, many people gained weight, with the number of people diagnosed with overweight and obesity rising. However, during 2022, consumers were encouraged to return to their pre-pandemic levels of fitness, so they worked out in the gym and also paid more attention to their diet. Health and fitness groups on social media platforms are followed by...
