Abstracts

Historically, the consumption of ice cream in Bolivia was on a trajectory, driven by an increase in the average income in the country in the last decade. However, as of 2019, this growth slowed down due to social conflicts which made it difficult to distribute the product, due to marches and protests triggered by claims of electoral fraud. Following this, the event of COVID-19 happened in 2020, thus creating mobility restrictions and further logistical challenges, alongside fewer impulse purchases...
