Abstracts

In 2023, imaging devices is set to show a continuation of the previous pattern of declining volume sales. Within digital cameras, both compact cameras and DSLRs are expected to continue to decline, while mirrorless system cameras are projected to sell better than in the previous year. As in previous years, value sales are expected to perform better than volume. This is because more expensive models tend to be purchased, and the market for entry-level models is collapsing due to the competition f...
