Abstracts

Juice achieved stable off-trade volume growth in 2023 with sales supported by the continued consumer demand for the largest product categories, especially nectars and juice drinks. In addition, the continued shift from carbonates to juice is having a positive impact on the category. Inflation and rising unit prices contributed to the double-digit off-trade value growth of juice, which prompted a majority of consumers to economise and opt for lower priced products.

Euromonitor International's Juice in North Macedonia report offers a comprehensive guide to the size and shape of the market at a national level.
