Abstracts

Retail value sales of luxury goods in Australia increased by 5% in 2023 in current terms, amounting to AUD24.3 billion. The post-lockdown period saw a prevailing emphasis on recovery and a resurgence of customary consumer habits, encompassing working, shopping, travelling again, and indulging in the purchase of luxury goods. In this context, development was predominantly characterised by affluent consumers' inclination to treat themselves as they regained the ability to do so. During the second...
