Abstracts

Turkey's important tourism industry is being negatively affected by the fallout from growing domestic instability. Terrorist attacks, an attempted coup and eroding democracy have contributed to a decline in tourists to this once-popular destination. The number of foreign visitors has continued to decline since August 2015, although it expects an increasing number of Russian tourists over the forecast period. On the other hand, a Turkish court in March 2017 ruled to block Turkish access to Bookin...
