Abstracts

Luxury leather goods, in common with other areas of personal luxury, saw sales plummet in 2020 as a result of both the marked decline in inbound tourism, especially from Mainland China, and local consumers' reluctance to visit physical stores during the pandemic. The sharp fall in the number of inbound tourists led many luxury brands to close stores located in tourist areas because of high rental fees. Meanwhile, local consumers steered clear of public settings, including physical stores, becaus...
