Abstracts

Having plunged by almost a third during 2020, there was no more than a modest rebound in retail volume sales of luxury leather goods during 2021. While consumers socialised more during the latter year, as COVID-19 restrictions were eased, events such as weddings, baptisms, first communions and birthday parties still tended to be much smaller than before the pandemic. As a result, many local consumers felt less need to purchase luxury leather goods. Meanwhile, many employees continued to work fro...
