Abstracts

Luxury leather goods is rebounding in 2021, following the steep negative figure declines seen in 2020. In 2020, particularly, and also into the first part of 2021, the category was impacted by limitations on the number of people in stores per square meter, which remained effective into the first half of 2021. However, the category is now showing signs of recovery, thanks to a number of factors, such as: improved consumer confidence following the vaccination programme in the country and the subse...
