Abstracts

Among other measures, stores selling non-essential goods were closed when the pandemic first emerged in South Africa, negatively impacting sales of luxury timepieces in 2020. Even when these stores reopened, they tend to be high contact, and many consumers avoided shopping to reduce the risk of infection whilst testing new products. In fact, due to the risk of infection, consumers in general have continued to stay away from shopping centres, where these stores are usually situated, choosing to shop...
