Abstracts

After a double-digit gain in the previous year, Japan's machinery export growth eased during 2018, dragging down overall industry revenue. Despite the weakened Japanese yen against the US dollar, an emerging trade conflict with South Korea largely contributed to the slowdown. Other major trade partners of Japanese companies include the US, China, Thailand and the Netherlands, which showed stable export revenue, thus ensuring growth remained in positive territory. Sales to the US, for example, he...
